

Decreasing Your Grocery Bills

Food costs money and the more of it that you save, the more your grocery bills are going to come down. One good way to save food is by keeping it in a refrigerator that will not let it spoil.

The Leonard Cleanable Refrigerator is scientifically built and will keep food pure and sweet. If food spoils in a Leonard, it's because you forgot to put ice in it.

There's space here to say but little about the Leonard, so come down to Mayer's Lifetime Furniture Store and let us show you these marvels of efficiency. They're inexpensive. Why, there's a beautiful one-piece porcelain-lined refrigerator for only $44.75.

BANQUET

ORANGE PEKOE TEA

ICED!

Banquet Orange Pekoe is the Choicest of true Ceylon hill-grown tea, famous for the finest flavor, the most fragrant bouquet, and a rich wine-color in the cup. With tinkling ice, sprig o' mint and slice of lemon, that flavor is even more brilliant and refreshing.

SENATE MAY DELAY SHIP SUBSIDY BILL

Canvass of G. O. P. Side Indicates Action Will Be Deferred.

A CANVASS of the republican members of the Senate on the proposal to take up at this session the administration's ship subsidy bill has developed the fact that there is strong sentiment against bringing the measure up at this time. The details of the bill which has been taken by the republican leaders, have not been made public.

The results of the canvass undoubtedly will be transmitted to the President, who has urged the passage of the subsidy bill before the adjournment of the present session, and has gone so far as to say that he will call Congress back into special session if it leaves before acting on the ship subsidy bill.

Reasons for Delay.
Various reasons are advanced by republican senators in opposition to taking the bill up now. It is said that the legislative program of the Senate and the situation is such that it would be practically impossible to act on the subsidy bill; that the tariff bill and the soldiers' bonus bill will carry the session of the Senate through the summer and almost to election time.

It is said, too, that the subsidy bill will require great consideration; that senators, particularly those from the middle west, must "be shown" before they will support a subsidy plan. Such a plan, it is urged, might not appeal to many of the voters, particularly in the middle west, and might bring about losses in the coming election.

Dry Issue Involved.
Still another reason advanced for putting off consideration of the subsidy bill is that the prohibition issue has become involved in it, due to the fact that liquor is being sold on shipping board vessels beyond the three-mile limit. The prohibition issue, it is said, is one that anxious members of the House would like to avoid on the eve of an election.

On the other hand, there are senators who believe, like the President, that the merchant marine situation demands action without delay. This is the attitude of Senator Jones of Washington, the chairman of the commerce committee and sponsor for the subsidy bill in the Senate. He insists that the bill must be passed as quickly as possible, if there is to be an American merchant marine.

There will be some democratic support for the ship subsidy bill, but the great majority of democrats will oppose it.

FEDERAL COAL CONTROL MUST COME, SAYS BORAH

Even Though Temporary Peace Is Reached, Government Must Rule, Declares Senator.

Drastic control of the coal industry by the government must come eventually, Senator Borah of Idaho, chairman of the Senate labor committee, declared in an informal statement commenting on President Harding's efforts to end the coal strike. Senator Borah said that he hoped the President's commission plan would bring results and added that a commission should be appointed to determine means for applying government control to the coal industry. "I think the suggestion of the President with reference to going back to work pending a settlement is, of course, entirely desirable," said Senator Borah. "But I do not believe that anything short of drastic control by the government of the coal industry will bring anything like permanent relief. A commission such as suggested might work out a settlement of the present trouble, but the thing will break out again in sixty days or six months. I feel, therefore, that after the present matter is adjusted by the President, if possible, there ought to be taken up the question of government control. This does not necessarily lead to government ownership, but it may."

That some legislation would be required to work out the President's present plan was assumed by Senator Borah who had no doubt that it would be enacted promptly by Congress upon the executive request. This would not be needed immediately in any event he said.

THE LATE PRINCE OF MONACO A Protest Against Honors to the Owner of Monte Carlo.

To the Editor of The Star.
On June 27 there was an editorial in The Star from which I quote the following:

"In a large measure the source of the wealth of the Prince of Monaco was the great gambling institution at Monte Carlo, located in his domain, patronized by people of all countries. From the taxes paid by the concession holders the ruler of Monaco gained an immense income, which he devoted to the enlargement of human knowledge. He was extremely liberal in his contributions to charity, doing things always on a large scale. Three times he had been in this country, the last time only a few months ago when he came to receive a medal bestowed by the National Geographic Society for his scientific work."

I could not but be surprised that The Star, which always stands for the best things, should have a considerable editorial on the subject of the Prince of Monaco that contained not one word of condemnation of his nefarious money-getting.

There was a man who lived in luxury and pursued studies that interested him by conducting a business that was absolutely wicked and that was the means of moral downfall to thousands of lives and of many suicides.

Why should such an evil character be invited to the United States to receive honors? What if he did make investigations that contributed some new facts to a branch of science?

What if he did use his diabolically gotten wealth to "do things on a large scale" and to be "a bountiful contributor to charity" possibly offset the fact that he lured weak men and women to moral destruction by the temptation he so cunningly set before them?

Was a single saloon-keeper ever honored in the United States, no matter what he did with his ill-gotten gains?

No! Thank God, we've driven him out of business. If we should honor a man who, on an immensely larger scale than a saloon-keeper, was the means of the ruin of innumerable men and women?

As a citizen, as a Christian, I protest.

MRS. HENRY B. F. MACFARLAND, Esperance, Quebec, July 7, 1922.

MURDER TRIAL OPENS

Trial was commenced yesterday before Chief Justice McCoy and a jury in Criminal Division 1 of Joseph Parker, colored, charged with murder in the first degree in connection with the death of Wesley King, also colored, November 21 last. The tragedy occurred at Delaware avenue and G street southwest during an altercation following a quarrel. Attorneys James O'Sullivan, Jr., and I. I. appear for the accused, while Assistant United States Attorney Emerson is conducting the prosecution.

PLEAD IN THEATER CASE.

Attorneys for Five Defendants Insist Action Should Be Quashed.

Counsel for the five defendants accused of manslaughter in connection with the death of ninety-seven patrons of the Knickerbocker Theater, caused by the collapse of the roof January 28 last, yesterday answered the arguments of United States Attorney Gordon and Assistant United States Attorney O'Leary at the final hearing on the demurrers filed against the indictment. Justice Suddons took the matter under advisement and is expected to render a decision before he leaves for his vacation at the end of the month.

U. S. LEADERSHIP 'LOST TO ENGLAND'

London Paper Says Harding Regime Has Weakened on World Economics.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, July 12.—In the second of a series of articles relating to economic conditions, the Times argues that the authority of the Harding administration is weaker than when the President convened the Washington conference, and, therefore, America was no longer in a position to take the initiative in the present problems.

The leadership thus devolved on England, who should permit France, Italy and Belgium to pay their war debts to England in German reparations bonds of the C and B categories, on the understanding that the bonds thus offered in payment be immediately destroyed by the British treasury.

Then at one stroke, the Times contends, the problem in Europe of interrelated debts would be cleared away and the German reparations debts would be diminished, roughly, by $1,100,000,000 sterling. The writer further contends that the first step toward this solution should be the prompt funding of the British debt to America. He declares that England never expected repayment of the French and Italian debts and that recovery of the Russian debt was out of the question. He expresses the belief that it would be more acceptable to France and Italy to pay their debts than to have them canceled, but that it would do more harm than good to issue special French and Italian bonds to provide the payment money, and that by the plan suggested the whole question might be solved without offense to the dignity of any ally.

SHIP HEARING TOMORROW

Marine Prohibition Decision Expected to Be Rendered Soon.

Much interest attaches to the hearing on ship prohibition tomorrow before the Department of Justice, judging from the number of briefs filed, as announced yesterday by Attorney General Daugherty.

Whether the Shipping Board will be represented remained an open question Mr. Daugherty stated, but the Attorney will be represented by Wayne B. Wheeler, and the government will hear any interested parties, presenting bona fide information.

Following hearings, an opinion will be reached as soon as possible by the Department, Mr. Daugherty said, to be forwarded to the Secretary of the Treasury. The question turns altogether on the law, he adds.

The Treasury is eager to get the opinion as soon as possible to clear up the situation relative to the enforcement of prohibition on all ships within the three mile limit, and also on the United States Shipping Board fleet on the seas.
